

- Prakash Kumar is a superlative technology business leader who also has deep understanding of policy issues, given his very long stint as an IAS officer. He is one of the few business leaders who are able to consistently convert conceptual innovations into reality. His indepth understanding of complexities of large solutions ensure that he is able to successfully lead large and complex projects
- Prakash is an outstanding leader , who made the transition from being a progressive bureaucrat to being an evangelist of technology for governance in the private sector. His unique blend of having served in government and then outside it provide him a unique perspective to the application of technology for better governance. I have known him for over 12 years now, from the time he was Secretary – IT at the Government of Delhi, where he was a client for me - I can vouch for the fact that Prakash had a vision for e-Governance ahead of the times and was responsible for some of the most pioneering initiatives in e-Governance in the country. His brilliant academic background enables him to grasp the nuances of issues very quickly and this, coupled with his practical approach to problems, made it a pleasure to deal with him as a client
