HONOUR CODE

In accordance with the Honour Code, all participants should,

1. Refrain from offences such as copying, cheating, plagiarizing, lying and colluding with other EEP participants (Non-Team Members/Team Members) in a manner not permitted by EEP, giving or receiving unauthorized aid, and resorting to bribery or intimidation to obtain an advantage over others.

2. Mention appropriate citations in any academic exercise such as stated Deliverables/Tool kits (at the end of each Phase), Prototypes and quizzes etc. as determined in the course structure of EEP. Some examples of violation of the Honour Code include:
   - Plagiarism
   - Sharing oral and written information during examinations or consulting written materials not authorized in the Course.
   - Unauthorized collaboration
   - Submitting another participant’s work as Your own

3. Maintain honesty in what You claim to have achieved academically and otherwise for the purpose of gaining any entry into the programme.

4. Uphold the spirit and letter of the Honour Code on Your part and cooperate in reporting violations of the Code by others.

5. Honour Code violations can be easily avoided if a few things are kept in mind.
   a. Understand all guidelines for academic assignments. Ask the EEP team (student coordinator), and do not rely on other participants for this information.
   b. Do not be tempted to take shortcuts not permitted by the course structure of EEP. Think about the value of personal integrity and the consequences of being caught.
   c. Be prepared in all academic work.
   d. Cite the resources from which academic assistance is gained - including people. Plagiarism is a violation of the Honour Code regardless of whether You are deliberately trying to pass off someone else’s words or thoughts as Your own or whether it is simply the result of sloppy scholarship.

I agree and understand all the terms and conditions stated above and provide my consent to joining the programme.
